ANOTHER INDIAN OUTRAGE.

Below will be found a letter from Dr. Inskeep, giving an account of the burning of his house, in Cold Spring Valley, on Sunday night. Mr. Lane, partner of Mr. Patrick, who was killed by the Indians a few weeks since, brought us the information, and Dr. I.'s letter. He further informs us that when the Doctor and his companion retreated, one man was left fast asleep at the grain stack, and as he has not been heard from, it is supposed he has been killed. At the time our informant left, the Doctor had not returned to his place, and it is thought that not only the house, but everything else, including the grain, is destroyed.

Editor Beacon—On last night, the Indians burned my dwelling-house, with provisions and clothing, and while the house was in flames the Indians were dancing on the hill within 400 yards of the house. They also made an attempt to burn Furguson's grain at the same time, and are constantly watching our roads and ranches for the purpose of murder and plunder. They have made two attempts to burn the stacks of grain last week, but my dog repelled them. They came within eighty yards of the stacks, where we sleep in order to protect them.
