THE INDIAN STRUGGLE NORTH.—The Trinity Journal relates the following incidents as having transpired in the late contest with the Indians near our northern frontier:

Jim Wilburn, who once distinguished himself by fighting a grizzly bear, hand to hand, was sent with a wounded man, and, returning, discovered an Indian in the bushes. He commenced singing, to mislead the savage, and then made a circuit; when opposite, the Indian rose and fired, the ball grazing Wilburn's ear, and for a little while paralyzing his right side. The hunter dropped his gun and made after the assailant with a big knife, but the Indian escaped.

All the volunteers were in Uniontown on Monday. They were to divide into three parties. There are in the neighborhood about 400 Indians, all painted flaming red, even to the squaws and children. They declare the intention of exterminating the whites. During the march back, after the recent battle, it was discovered that the Indian women pinched their children so that their squalling might discover the locality of the party. This occasioned the shooting of Calvin Gunn.

AMENTO DAILY

SACRAMENTO, FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 4, 1859.

overnor's | —namely: two loaves and two fishes. [Laughter.] | of Supervisors of San Mateo county to carry a special | Mr. Pres. Moore—Decidedly out of order, and—