

INDIAN SLAVE TRADE IN THE NORTHERN PART OF THE STATE.—The Humboldt Times says that parties in a remote portion of that county are engaged in the business of kidnapping Indian children and disposing of them to families in the towns and settlements, receiving such a sum of money as may be agreed upon between the high contracting powers, in each instance from thirty to fifty dollars, according to the 'trouble' incurred in obtaining possession of the children. It is intimated—and upon pretty good authority—that stratagem, and sometimes force, is made use of to capture the children, the consent of the children and their relatives being considered of but little importance. What amount of force or cunning is required to obtain possession of these little savages, we do not pretend to say; but any one who has lived long on this portion of the Pacific coast does not need to be told that Indians do not, as a general practice, consent to have their children taken to a distance to reside among strangers.

LIFE IN SOUTH CALIFORNIA.

The following extract from a letter written by a lady of South Carolina, to a relative in New York, has been made public:

You may imagine, dear uncle, our situation, but you never can realize it in its fulness. Already we tremble in our own homes in anticipation and expectancy of what is liable to burst forth at any moment—a negro insurrection. Could you see the care and precaution displayed here by the proprietors of the negroes, not only plants, but every one, but every one, you would not wonder that we do not get away from our own homes in their quarters; but our most ordinary times we would trust to any extent, are watched and guarded against, with all the scrutiny and care that we possess. Our planters and owners of slave property do not allow their servants to have any intercourse with each other, and the negroes are confined strictly to the premises where they belong. We are obliged to increase our force of overseers to prevent the same. The negroes feel and voice these feelings, and naturally ask, WHY ARE WE HERE?—unnecessary for them to ask, the question, for they all comprehend the same as well as who own them. They have already learned enough to give them an idea of what is going on in the State and nation, and this knowledge they have not gained from abolitionists as some suppose, but from the conversation of their owners, indirectly held in their presence. They have already heard of Lincoln's election, and have heard also that he is for giving them their liberty, and you may imagine the result.

You have heard that our servants all love their masters, and their masters' families, and would lay down their lives for them;—that the colored race in the South prefer slavery to freedom—that they would not be free if they could, &c., &c. That is the poetry of the case; the reality consists in keeping upon our arms at night—in demolishing and burning our doors—in establishing and maintaining an exact police force—in watching watching and in locking them up and ourselves from the violence of these same loving servants;—vengeance which, though now smothered, is liable to break out at any moment, to overwhelm the State in spite of the false oaths and State precautions. You at the North are not the only one who are suffering financially by this
