

INDIAN HOSTILITIES.—A dispatch was received at Fort Kearny, from Cotton-wood Springs, Jan. 1st, stating that the Indians had taken possession of everything at the latter place, the mail station included. The whole country is said to be alarmed, and without weapons of defense. Immediately on receipt of the dispatch, Col. Miles, in command at Fort Kearny, ordered two companies of dragoons to start the next morning at daylight, to protect the citizens and keep the road open.

AN ELOQUENT LAWYER.
 Oliver H. Browning, of Quincy, Illinois, is one of the finest orators of the West that before a jury has, perhaps, no superior in the country. In the celebrated Burdick case, recently tried at Chicago, of Browning was the leading counsel for the defendant, and a correspondent thus speaks of his effort on that occasion: Mr. Browning commenced his argument in the celebrated Burdick divorce case. His words, to hear which, an impromptu crowd gathered at the Court House, a large portion of which was composed of ladies.
 Mr. Browning is probably one of the most effective speakers in the West before a jury, and strongly resembles Abraham Lincoln in many respects. Before commencing his argument he removed his neck tie, and fastened it over his coat. On interest during his speech he would frequently throw back his coat from his neck and shoulders. At times he kept one hand in his pocket, making sweeping gestures with the other. Now he talked to the audience, and now, face to face, with a jury-man. Again he would stand with a law-book in his hand, pointing at him as he asked a question after question with rapid utterance. During the whole afternoon he unchained the attention of his audience, and carried them along irresistibly upon the flood of his eloquence. During the splendid burst of eloquence, which we apprehend, he elicited the entire sympathy of the audience. There was scarcely a dry eye. The Court, the jury, the counsel and spectators, were in tears, and many were sobbing aloud. Strong men, unable to control their feelings, bowed their heads and wept. Mrs. Church was deeply agitated and Mr. Leach bowed his head and covered his face to conceal the fast flowing tears.
 Mr. Leach with sat with his eyes closed with tears, his fine features lit up with a smile of triumphant gratification. What the feelings of the complainant were, could not be judged by his face, which was as blank to any one attempting to read it. It was one of the most solemn scenes I have ever witnessed in Court.
 Any one who has ever heard Browning in a criminal trial can well believe what is said of the effect of his speech in this case.
 It is not the first time he has caused a shower in a crowded court room. But the writer must have drawn entirely on his imagination to detect any resemblances to
