

INDIAN DEPRIDATIONS.—On every hand we hear constant complaint that the Indians continue the predatory warfare upon the settlers. Weak settlements on the frontiers have been abandoned in consequence of the increased boldness of the savages, who kill with impunity the stock necessarily left behind; and not content with what they can make use of for food, they slaughter all they come across, thro' a spirit of wantonness and hatred of the whites.

The Game of Lifer.
 There's a game much in fashion—I think it's called Lifer; (Though I never have played it for pleasure or lucre.)
 In which, when the cards are in certain conditions,
 The players appear to have changed their positions.
 And one of them utters, in a confident tone,
 "I think I may venture to go it alone."

From Arthur's Magazine.
"Bound Out."
 BY THOMAS F. POWERS.
 "There's no other way, Elmira, and there won't be any use in making a fuss about it. You'll have to bind Newman and Dory out."
 "Oh, don't, Daniel, don't!" exclaimed mama, lifting up both her hands and growing quite white in the face. "Any-man, because mama said I must, and I don't let her know how hard I have to work, or how I lie awake nights, and cry, thinking about the time when papa was alive, and used to take me on his knee every evening, and call me, his darling little Doty."

 "It seems an age since I was here, though it's only three months, and mama said, the last time I was at home—I am working very hard to get a sewing ma-

I, are responsible; and she wouldn't have lost anything little generous to my sister dren. I would have paid you cost you."
 Uncle Daniel looked crossful he stammered out something couldn't hear, and then he let "It will do him good," said out, as the door closed.
 "I think it will," answered
