What is to be Done ?

The moment Capt Wrights company reached the country cast of the Redwoods, no Indians could be found where before stock was shot down before the owner's eyes and in right of his house, but the ranches on the coast were at once alive with strange Indians. They have also been seen packing beef from the mountains to the coast.

It is a fact beyond dispute that the ranches considered friendly have become lurking places for the mountains Lodians, who have always been the common for of the whites, and are treated as such at this time.

The coast Indians are known to trade with them and aupply them with powder and other articles which enable them to continue their depredations against the settlers and they also share in their plunder. The most tion they have occupied renders them greater obstacles to the growth and prosperity of this country. They are as to the British in the war of the Revolution; they are enemies in que own comp, and we can never look for exemption from depredations and outrages in the mountains as long as any communication is allowed between the diggers there and on the coast.

For these reasons would it not be better to break up these establishments and let a temporary reservation be formed at Fort Humboldt? The old Indians, squaws and abildren may collect there and should then be provided with the means of subsistence. To send them to any of the Indian reservations now would be a mockery. These all

The old Indians, squaws and children may collect there and should their be provided with the means of subsistence. To send them to any of the Indian reservations now, would be a mockery. Those already sent there are obliged to leave of starve. The management of Indian affair in this State is a burning shame and disgrace to our Government and we see no prospect of any immediate change for the better.

under the present state of things in this see tion. The U.S. troops stationed here, it is true, have failed to protect the lives and property of white people, but they may be able to take care of a few squaws and children. If not, we shall utterly despair of any good resulting from their presence in our county.
