

INDIAN OUTRAGES IN HUMBOLDT.—From the Times of the 29th ult. we gather the following particulars of the late doings of the red devils in our neighboring county. A correspondent prefaces a letter from Arcata, dated March the 27th, in the following language:

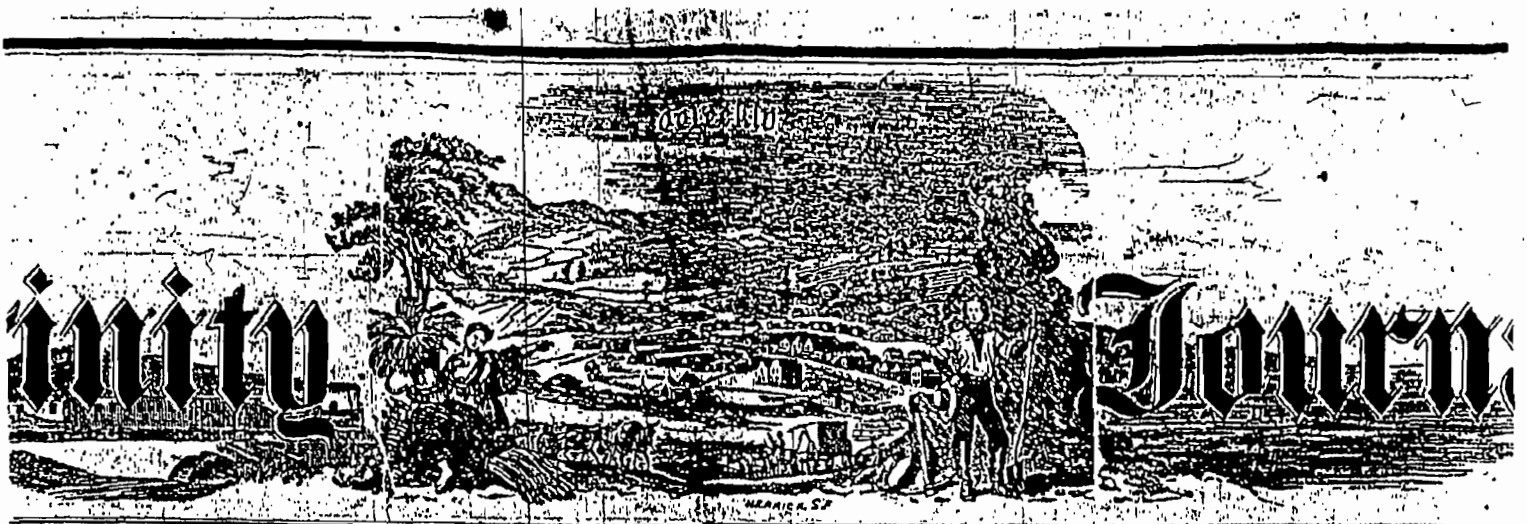

"Saturday they killed Zehndner and burned his house; Sunday, burned his other buildings; Monday, burned Goodman's house; Tuesday, Mrs. Brehmer's; and yesterday, killed Mr. Bates and burned his house;—what they will do to-morrow, or to what extent they will carry their work of destruction, none can tell."

Zehndner is now at Arcata, doing well. Two days after, Goodman's family were taken to Bates' for safety, and their house was burned immediately after they left it. The next day Mr. Haulou's house, near by was burned.

The writer gives the following particulars of the killing of Bates:

"Mr. A. S. Bates, whose ranch is about seven miles from this place, and who has never been considered in danger, was killed within three hundred yards of his house. It was 10 o'clock in the morning, and he had gone to look for a cow, when the report of two guns was heard at his house, and soon after his dog that was with him returned wounded. There was at the house, Mr. Goodman—who was sick—his wife and five children, Mrs. Bates and three children, and Mr. B. O'roghan. The Indians then began shooting into the back of the house and as soon as possible its inmates left and fled toward the river amidst a shower of bullets that fortunately harmed no one.

Mrs. Simmons, living near by joined them with three children, carrying three guns with her. She had seen the Indians and counted thirty; she fired the guns as a signal to Mr. Simmons—who had started shortly before for town—and reloaded them. They succeeded in reaching the river, where they met Mr. Simmons and Mr. Aiden, who took them across to the log house of Mr. John Wilson, where they remained a short time and then came down the river to Mr. Daby's in a canoe.

Weaverville, California, Saturday, April 12, 1862.

THE TRINITY WEEKLY JOURNAL, PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY. PRINTED BY J. W. BROWN, AT THE TRINITY PRESS, CORNER OF THE CHURCH AND MAIN STREETS. TERMS: $1.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. SINGLE COPIES, 5 CENTS.