

CATTLE KILLED.—Several head of cattle have been killed lately by hostile Indians in the Eel river and Yager creek settlements. About two weeks since a pair of oxen, belonging to Mr. Hiram Lyons, three miles from Hydesville, were driven from within fifty yards of his house to a distance of a mile and killed. Mr. Simmons has had several head of cows killed but a short distance from Hydesville.

THE HUMBOLDT TIMES.

EUREKA, HUMBOLDT COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 13, 1861.

Business Directory.

E. L. WALLACE,
SALE IN WINE, LIQUORS, &c. East side the Plaza, Astoria.

For public amusement, he has two of the finest Combination Oubon Billiard Tables.

EMPIRE SALOON,
near Front and G streets, Eureka. W. H. SALOON PROPRIETOR. EMPIRE SALOON is a public place, where the undersigned will be pleased to receive the patronage of his friends in the public generally.

W. H. SALOON, at all times, he will supply the choicest WINES, LIQUORS and CIGARS, to be purchased in the State.

BRETT'S SALOON,
NORTH ST., NEAR THE CITY WHARF, Eureka, will be found open at all reasonable hours. This Saloon is supplied with two different kinds of liquors—W. H. SALOON PROPRIETOR. He has the most choice articles in the line of liquors and CIGARS.

Second story is newly fitted up for lodgings. Eureka, July 14, 1860.

PHENIX EXCHANGE.

H. S. BOULLE, Proprietor. Thankful for past favors, the Proprietor would respectfully inform his friends and the public generally, that he has thoroughly renovated and fitted up the "PHENIX EXCHANGE," as a FIRST CLASS HOTEL. His tables will at all times be supplied with the best of the San Francisco market can afford.

His rooms are well ventilated, and fitted up in the most commodious style. In his Bar, may be found the MOST CHOICE LIQUORS and CIGARS.

TERMS, TO SUIT THE TIMES. Breakfast, from half past five to seven. Dinner, at twelve. Supper, from half past five to seven.

BAY HOTEL,

Eureka. The Proprietor of the BAY HOTEL, corner of H and First streets, having had the building newly furnished, had the tables painted and repaired, would respectfully inform his friends generally, that he will be prepared to receive a share of their patronage on Monday the 14th inst.

General Winchell's Story.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CANADIAN REVOLUTION.

The long post-up fires of Canadian discontent had at length burst forth throughout the whole extent of the two provinces, from Quebec to Penobscot, in many acts of open rebellion, which threatened ere long to throw this Empire and its continental revolution. Thirty thousand American sympathizers, possessing as a general thing as little objection as true courage, and less capital than either, responded to the call of Morris, Paine, and other equally patriotic Canadian demagogues, and were rallying their forces at various points along the whole American frontier, preparing in defiance of all law, banners or divines, to invade Canada, crush the gallant Yorks of British, French, and American colonies, revolutionize British America, and establish a model republic, under which every American liberator was to hold an office of trust and profit.

Commissions of generals, colonels, commodores, and army and navy captains, were as plenty and common among the rebel and crusaders in Western New York, Ohio, and Michigan, as were the flocks of worthless "wild cat" bank notes of the same period in the latter State.

I had taken a very active interest in the big game, and the "Canadian Congress," assembled in an obscure cell in Cleveland, Ohio, had rewarded my zeal by making me a captain in the Canadian navy, with the present command of a little fore-and-aft schooner, and that of a first-class line-of-battle ship in prospect.

It was late in the season when I was sent to Buffalo with my vessel, for the purpose of recruiting six old brass six-pounders, which were to constitute the schooner's battery, when the war was fairly begun, and a considerable quantity of ammunition, together with three hundred muskets, dragoons' umbrellas, and pieces of machinery, which were to be used by the patriot army in the west to commence the war with.

By the exercise of some little tact on my part, I was able to procure the arms and accoutrements, and to get the vessel fitted out in a few days.

With my lamp well trimmed and burning, I interposed.

With those bleeding wounds upon my hands and side, for all who have lived and served these best soldiers, they had died, scourged, and mocked, and crucified.

And in the grave his life has been buried! If my feeble prayer can reach thee, O my darling, I beseech thee, Even as thou hast died for me, Mine sincerely Let me follow where thou hast died, before, breathing thy spirit's spirit, Dies, if dying I may give Life to one who asks to live, And never more, Dying thus, resemble thee!

General Winchell's Story.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CANADIAN REVOLUTION.

The long post-up fires of Canadian discontent had at length burst forth throughout the whole extent of the two provinces, from Quebec to Penobscot, in many acts of open rebellion, which threatened ere long to throw this Empire and its continental revolution. Thirty thousand American sympathizers, possessing as a general thing as little objection as true courage, and less capital than either, responded to the call of Morris, Paine, and other equally patriotic Canadian demagogues, and were rallying their forces at various points along the whole American frontier, preparing in defiance of all law, banners or divines, to invade Canada, crush the gallant Yorks of British, French, and American colonies, revolutionize British America, and establish a model republic, under which every American liberator was to hold an office of trust and profit.

Commissions of generals, colonels, commodores, and army and navy captains, were as plenty and common among the rebel and crusaders in Western New York, Ohio, and Michigan, as were the flocks of worthless "wild cat" bank notes of the same period in the latter State.

I had taken a very active interest in the big game, and the "Canadian Congress," assembled in an obscure cell in Cleveland, Ohio, had rewarded my zeal by making me a captain in the Canadian navy, with the present command of a little fore-and-aft schooner, and that of a first-class line-of-battle ship in prospect.

It was late in the season when I was sent to Buffalo with my vessel, for the purpose of recruiting six old brass six-pounders, which were to constitute the schooner's battery, when the war was fairly begun, and a considerable quantity of ammunition, together with three hundred muskets, dragoons' umbrellas, and pieces of machinery, which were to be used by the patriot army in the west to commence the war with.

By the exercise of some little tact on my part, I was able to procure the arms and accoutrements, and to get the vessel fitted out in a few days.

With my lamp well trimmed and burning, I interposed.

With those bleeding wounds upon my hands and side, for all who have lived and served these best soldiers, they had died, scourged, and mocked, and crucified.

And in the grave his life has been buried! If my feeble prayer can reach thee, O my darling, I beseech thee, Even as thou hast died for me, Mine sincerely Let me follow where thou hast died, before, breathing thy spirit's spirit, Dies, if dying I may give Life to one who asks to live, And never more, Dying thus, resemble thee!

General Winchell's Story.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CANADIAN REVOLUTION.

The long post-up fires of Canadian discontent had at length burst forth throughout the whole extent of the two provinces, from Quebec to Penobscot, in many acts of open rebellion, which threatened ere long to throw this Empire and its continental revolution. Thirty thousand American sympathizers, possessing as a general thing as little objection as true courage, and less capital than either, responded to the call of Morris, Paine, and other equally patriotic Canadian demagogues, and were rallying their forces at various points along the whole American frontier, preparing in defiance of all law, banners or divines, to invade Canada, crush the gallant Yorks of British, French, and American colonies, revolutionize British America, and establish a model republic, under which every American liberator was to hold an office of trust and profit.

Commissions of generals, colonels, commodores, and army and navy captains, were as plenty and common among the rebel and crusaders in Western New York, Ohio, and Michigan, as were the flocks of worthless "wild cat" bank notes of the same period in the latter State.

I had taken a very active interest in the big game, and the "Canadian Congress," assembled in an obscure cell in Cleveland, Ohio, had rewarded my zeal by making me a captain in the Canadian navy, with the present command of a little fore-and-aft schooner, and that of a first-class line-of-battle ship in prospect.

It was late in the season when I was sent to Buffalo with my vessel, for the purpose of recruiting six old brass six-pounders, which were to constitute the schooner's battery, when the war was fairly begun, and a considerable quantity of ammunition, together with three hundred muskets, dragoons' umbrellas, and pieces of machinery, which were to be used by the patriot army in the west to commence the war with.

By the exercise of some little tact on my part, I was able to procure the arms and accoutrements, and to get the vessel fitted out in a few days.

With my lamp well trimmed and burning, I interposed.

With those bleeding wounds upon my hands and side, for all who have lived and served these best soldiers, they had died, scourged, and mocked, and crucified.

And in the grave his life has been buried! If my feeble prayer can reach thee, O my darling, I beseech thee, Even as thou hast died for me, Mine sincerely Let me follow where thou hast died, before, breathing thy spirit's spirit, Dies, if dying I may give Life to one who asks to live, And never more, Dying thus, resemble thee!

General Winchell's Story.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CANADIAN REVOLUTION.

The long post-up fires of Canadian discontent had at length burst forth throughout the whole extent of the two provinces, from Quebec to Penobscot, in many acts of open rebellion, which threatened ere long to throw this Empire and its continental revolution. Thirty thousand American sympathizers, possessing as a general thing as little objection as true courage, and less capital than either, responded to the call of Morris, Paine, and other equally patriotic Canadian demagogues, and were rallying their forces at various points along the whole American frontier, preparing in defiance of all law, banners or divines, to invade Canada, crush the gallant Yorks of British, French, and American colonies, revolutionize British America, and establish a model republic, under which every American liberator was to hold an office of trust and profit.

Commissions of generals, colonels, commodores, and army and navy captains, were as plenty and common among the rebel and crusaders in Western New York, Ohio, and Michigan, as were the flocks of worthless "wild cat" bank notes of the same period in the latter State.

I had taken a very active interest in the big game, and the "Canadian Congress," assembled in an obscure cell in Cleveland, Ohio, had rewarded my zeal by making me a captain in the Canadian navy, with the present command of a little fore-and-aft schooner, and that of a first-class line-of-battle ship in prospect.

It was late in the season when I was sent to Buffalo with my vessel, for the purpose of recruiting six old brass six-pounders, which were to constitute the schooner's battery, when the war was fairly begun, and a considerable quantity of ammunition, together with three hundred muskets, dragoons' umbrellas, and pieces of machinery, which were to be used by the patriot army in the west to commence the war with.

By the exercise of some little tact on my part, I was able to procure the arms and accoutrements, and to get the vessel fitted out in a few days.

With my lamp well trimmed and burning, I interposed.

With those bleeding wounds upon my hands and side, for all who have lived and served these best soldiers, they had died, scourged, and mocked, and crucified.

And in the grave his life has been buried! If my feeble prayer can reach thee, O my darling, I beseech thee, Even as thou hast died for me, Mine sincerely Let me follow where thou hast died, before, breathing thy spirit's spirit, Dies, if dying I may give Life to one who asks to live, And never more, Dying thus, resemble thee!

General Winchell's Story.

AN INCIDENT OF THE CANADIAN REVOLUTION.

The long post-up fires of Canadian discontent had at length burst forth throughout the whole extent of the two provinces, from Quebec to Penobscot, in many acts of open rebellion, which threatened ere long to throw this Empire and its continental revolution. Thirty thousand American sympathizers, possessing as a general thing as little objection as true courage, and less capital than either, responded to the call of Morris, Paine, and other equally patriotic Canadian demagogues, and were rallying their forces at various points along the whole American frontier, preparing in defiance of all law, banners or divines, to invade Canada, crush the gallant Yorks of British, French, and American colonies, revolutionize British America, and establish a model republic, under which every American liberator was to hold an office of trust and profit.

Commissions of generals, colonels, commodores, and army and navy captains, were as plenty and common among the rebel and crusaders in Western New York, Ohio, and Michigan, as were the flocks of worthless "wild cat" bank notes of the same period in the latter State.

I had taken a very active interest in the big game, and the "Canadian Congress," assembled in an obscure cell in Cleveland, Ohio, had rewarded my zeal by making me a captain in the Canadian navy, with the present command of a little fore-and-aft schooner, and that of a first-class line-of-battle ship in prospect.

It was late in the season when I was sent to Buffalo with my vessel, for the purpose of recruiting six old brass six-pounders, which were to constitute the schooner's battery, when the war was fairly begun, and a considerable quantity of ammunition, together with three hundred muskets, dragoons' umbrellas, and pieces of machinery, which were to be used by the patriot army in the west to commence the war with.

By the exercise of some little tact on my part, I was able to procure the arms and accoutrements, and to get the vessel fitted out in a few days.

With my lamp well trimmed and burning, I interposed.

With those bleeding wounds upon my hands and side, for all who have lived and served these best soldiers, they had died, scourged, and mocked, and crucified.

And in the grave his life has been buried! If my feeble prayer can reach thee, O my darling, I beseech thee, Even as thou hast died for me, Mine sincerely Let me follow where thou hast died, before, breathing thy spirit's spirit, Dies, if dying I may give Life to one who asks to live, And never more, Dying thus, resemble thee!