

FROM PITT RIVER.—On Wednesday, the first inst., Lockhart's company found in Pitt river valley the body of a German who was killed by the Indians in the massacre at that place. His throat had been cut, and with a log chain fastened to his legs, he had been thrown into the river. In a rancheria, a human skull was found, supposed to be that of an old man who had gone to the valley in company with Mr. Rogers. The company now in Pitt river valley numbers twenty men. One night two Indian spies were seen near the camp, and were shot. One was killed, but the other escaped. When Lockhart and his party first arrived in the valley, they found about 400 Indians; since then only small parties of them have occasionally been seen. It is the opinion of Mr. Lockhart that these Indians cannot escape over the mountains, on account of the great amount of snow.
