

INDIAN RESERVATION.—We learn from Col. E. A. Stevenson that the Indian Reservation under his charge is in a flourishing condition. The Col. tells us there are about four thousand Indians at Nome Lackee all in a healthy, contented condition. There are two thousand acres of wheat sown on the Reserve, which promises to yield a fair average crop.

The probabilities are that Col. Stevenson will remain in charge of this place, as Col. Healy, from late reports from Washington is to continue in charge of Indian Affairs in California, and Col. Stevenson stands well with Col. Healy and the department.

Col. Stevenson is an efficient agent, and gives general satisfaction to the people of the vicinity of Nome Lackee. The Indians seem to be under good subjection and work cheerfully with the promise of food during the winter months. Added to his efficiency as Indian agent, Col. S. is a gentleman who, by his social manner and courteous deportment, has secured a large circle of friends in this community.
