

News from the Indian Fighters.

Lieut. J. B. Collins arrived in town last evening from the mountains and reports that two engagements have been had since last advices, resulting in the death of fifteen Indians. On Wednesday night ten men were sent down Eel river in canoes to the mouth of Larrabee creek to take a ranch of the enemy, in which they will probably be successful. The troops are at present encamped near the head of Larrabee creek. The Indians are constantly on the move to avoid an attack; all marches of the troops are made by night. Lieut. Collins speaks in the highest terms of the volunteers; they are attentive, active, and most happy to carry out all his views. The Lieut. came in with the train for supplies, — will return immediately and endeavor to give protection to the settlers. No Indian signs have been seen near Taqua ranch for two weeks, where they have heretofore been met with every day.

The establishment of a permanent military post in the region now occupied by the troops is absolutely necessary, and its speedy erection will be strongly recommended. We are glad to learn that the citizens who were driven from their homes are returning with their stock.

THE SNOW FORT.
 In the happy days of boyhood,
 How fondly we remember
 In our golden age of boyhood,
 We built castles in the snow,
 In the glittering drifts we quarried
 And our mason work was rare
 At those mountain, many-towered,
 Mansions built out of air.
 Though our ramparts and our fosses
 Might have puzzled old Yankee,
 What cared we, the archin bosses,
 For old Fort and plan?
 All our castles were the queerest
 Ever reared by human skill;
 But the games we chose the dearest
 Ever, for, was Bunker Hill.
 How the parts of British leaders
 Went a'coring, one and all;
 How we all were earnest pleaders
 For front pieces on the wall!
 Boys, detailed for service foreign,
 Fell in line with doubtful brow—
 Each one clamored to be wrong,
 And none wished to be wrong.
 Then, the battle—ah! we fought it
 Not at all in Henry's light;
 How the peaky English caught it,
 How they always lost the fight.
 In our days, we were never wrong,
 And to facts entirely blind,
 Down the hill we always went them,
 And we prepared them behind.
 Thus we fought the fight of Bunker's
 In the days that knew no care,
 Ere the snow we tossed as youngsters
 Time had sprinkled an old hair.
 Now, alas! in the force habit
 Daily we fight against the world,
 Harder than against us, as we
 Than our boy-arm ever built.
