

MENDOCINO INDIANS.—A correspondent of the San Francisco Herald complains of Indian depredations. He says that the people are settlers living in the wilderness and struggling to raise something for their support, but no sooner does a crop become available, than it is stolen by the Indians. Houses, too, are often broken open by them and plundered. The correspondent concludes as follows:

We are tax-paying and law-abiding citizens, but there is a point beyond which forbearance ceases to be a virtue; and if relief does not come soon, it will be impossible for the patient and long-suffering portion of the community to restrain the aggrieved from plunging the State into another Indian war, which will cost one thousand times as much as the trifle necessary to be expended for our protection now, and also save us from committing acts in self-defense at which humanity shudders.

Respectfully,

C. THOMPSON
