

---

The Recent Indian Outrages on Mad River.

Again we are obliged to fill our columns with tales of murder, of fearful wounds, of property destroyed, and of a community plunged at once into grief, sympathy and anxiety. Another desperate attack, more bold in its plans, more daring in its execution, and more disastrous in its results than any that has preceded it has been made. A loved and honored member of society—a woman grown gray in our midst, has been foully murdered, and other hellish deeds perpetrated by the savages, which makes the heart sick to relate. Two more homes have been destroyed, two more grieved families turned homeless and sorrowing into the world. Subjoined we give particulars:

At 5½ o'clock Friday evening the 6th inst., Oak Ranch, or Daby's Ferry, on Mad River, the property of S. Daby, was attacked by a strong force of Indians.— The occupants of the dwelling at the time the attack was made were Mr. Daby, wife and three children, Mrs. George Danskin, (mother of Mrs. Daby,) and her little grandson, "Georgy" Danskin, aged about six years, Peter Nizet, two soldiers little grandson, "Georgy" Danskin, aged about six years, Peter Nizet, two soldiers from Fort Gaston, as also a little Indian boy and girl, servants in the family.

DANSKIN, (MOTHER OF ...)

The first idea was to defend the house; but upon going to the door and seeing it completely surrounded by Indians, pouring in a murderous fire from every direction, they deemed death certain if they remained, and so adopted the only alternative, and fled from the house toward the river, considering an escape by descending the river in a boat the only possible one. Amid a shower of bullets they all reached the boat, excepting one of the soldiers who remained near the house, bravely attempting to keep the Indians back, at which post he was wounded, but eluded the Indians by secreting himself.

Upon finding Indians upon both banks of the river firing upon the helpless canoe continually, they landed with the hope of reaching the brush. The soldier and Mrs. Danskin were both wounded while in the boat and fell within a short distance from it after landing. The soldier, by some means, escaped. Mrs. Danskin evidently fell dead, having received three wounds.

Upon leaving the boat, Mr. Daby, Mr. Nizet and Mrs. Daby, each took one of the children.

Shortly after her mother fell, Mrs. Daby received a wound in her left arm, the ball passing from near her elbow to her wrist, and inflicting a painful, though not serious wound. She stooped to secure her child that was falling from her arms, and Mr. Daby, who was near her, thought she was killed. Mrs. Daby says that at this time there were four Indians within six feet of Mr. Daby, all pointing their guns at him. She here became separated from her husband, and supposed him dead. She soon started again with the child, and went some distance before the Indians overtook her. When they did so, the one calling himself Captain spoke to her, inquiring where the money was in the house. He told her he knew her and would not hurt her or the children; that he was sorry they had killed the old "squaw," and that she might come to town and get white men to come and get the body; also, that they would take dead. She soon started again with the child, and went some distance before the Indians overtook her. When they did so, the one calling himself Captain spoke to her, inquiring where the money was in the house. He told her he knew her and would not hurt her or the children; that he was sorry they had killed the old "squaw," and that she might come to town and get white men to come and get the body; also, that they would take the little white pappoose and the little Indian girl prisoners, and would not hurt them. He took the money from her pockets and a ring from her finger. As she was being searched, she saw two men coming to her, and she has the impression that one of them was a white man, blacked. She caught his eye and he immediately turned and walked off. When the Indians left her she took her baby in her arms, her second child on her back, and with the oldest one clinging to her dress, she started for town. In this way she came nearly a mile, when she hid the two eldest and came on with the infant till at Janes she met the party going out, and was accompanied to her mother's house.

Mr. Daby, upon finding himself so closely pursued, laid the child in the brush to defend himself, calling to the Frenchman to do the same. He was followed a mile and a half by a number of Indians, being fired at constantly. He loaded as he ran, and fired four shots in return. Upon at last escaping, he came immediately to Arcata to secure assistance in recovering his children.

A party immediately started to the rescue, and upon reaching the ranch found the house burned and the Indians gone. The body of Mrs. Danskin was brought in, and also the two wounded soldiers. Nothing was seen of Nizet, little George or the two Indian children. The next morning the Indian boy was found wounded in the leg.

Annual Meeting of the H. C. A. S.

HUMBOLDT TIMES.

HUMBOLDT COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1862.

om us One -s. t. law! its ne! un, aintly dust	[From our Extra of Tuesday.] Startling Indian Depredations! INCREASED BOLDNESS OF THE SAVAGES!	sient number of names to form a company of rifles. Adopted. The Chairman appointed the following gentlemen as a Committee to draft resolutions: S. G. Whipple, James Hanna, Jonathan Clark, W. H. Pratt and Walter Van Dyke. June 10—9 A. M.—Meeting met pursuant to adjournment. The Committee on Resolutions made the following report:	Letter from Orpheus C. Kerr. Sunshine has at last resumed specie payment, my boy, and every man that chooses can walk under golden beams once more. The sacred soil is drying up as rapidly as an old maid after forty-two, and boot-blacks begin to quote at high figures. The General of the Mackerel Brigade is so blissful at having a polish	CLANDESTINE MARRIAGE OR WALKS.—The Land of the Detroit Advertiser expected absence of the from the opening of t says: The cause of his spring from the Prince foreign countries; it
--	---	---	--	--