PLACERVILLE, June 22, 1851.

Messrs. Editors:—The events of the last few days in this vicinity, furnish very little material wherewith to fill a letter. The weather has been oppressively warm, and we feel the want of those refreshing showers which, in the Western States, are usual at this time of the year. Major Rogers, with Capt. Tracy's company of seventy-five mounted men have left their camp at Johnson's Ranch for Carson Valley. This expedition is undertaken, I understand, at the instance of the U. S. Indian Commissioners. Capt. Tuesland's company of fifty men, will act as an escort for the Commissioners, until a peace is concluded. The Indians to the number of from 500 to 1000, are expected in this week.

This region of country already begins to reap benefit from the war just concluded. A large tract of country east of us, which had hitherto been very imperfectly explored, is now opened to the enterprise of the miners, and is being rapidly filled up. Some very rich deposits have already been found, and doubtless many more will soon be discovered, for the country has every appearance of being rich in mineral wealth. Two months ago a man was scarcely safe out of sight of the villages, whereas now the miners are penetrating far into the mountains, and we hear of no depredations being committed.

The District Court, Judge Farwell presiding, has been in session at Coloma during the past week, and will probably continue one or two weeks longer. A divorce—the first ever grant-
