resented the insolence by a different style of rebuke; but observing that his coldness produced not the slightest effect upon the imperturbable countenance of his interlocutor, relaxed, and re- rate luck to-night. The very devil seems to possess the cards." These words were uttered by the same voice which the visitors had heard in the parlor, and came from the lips of one of three riage graceful, and his voice as soft and flexible as the most fastidious admirer of such an accomplishment could desire. To these natural qualifications he added a suit of female attire,
