

INDIAN RAIDS.—These excursions are becoming quite fashionable among the diggers just now. On Wednesday last James Knight, of Elk River, was shot at, a few miles from his house, while driving his cattle out to grass. He had stopped to eat lunch, when he was fired at by an Indian in ambush, the ball grazing his neck. He saw several Indians, but made his escape. He has gone back, with some of his neighbors, to look after his cattle.

~~On the same day a party of Indians entered the house of John McCreedy,~~ four or five miles above this place, and robbed it of everything they could carry off, including two guns. He came upon them as they were leaving the house and gave chase, but an Indian in the bushes, on the look out, fired upon him, when he made "chase" the other way and escaped.
