

VOLUNTEERS.—The time for which the thirty volunteers were enrolled will expire next week. Whether they will be re-enrolled for another term of service or not cannot be known here before the return of the steamer. The importance of having an adequate armed force in the field during the summer and fall has been properly represented to the powers that be, and all that can now be done is to await their decision. Governor Downey is advised of the situation of affairs and will do his duty in the premises. He, however, can do but little, except upon the requisition of General Sumner, while the Federal troops remain in the county. Should the regular troops be withdrawn—which many think will be done before long—then it will be in the power of the Governor to call into service State troops, to afford protection to the citizens.

A suitable site for a military post has been selected in the country occupied by the hostile Indians, and its establishment and occupancy by regular troops has been recommended by an officer competent to judge. This would seem to be the most desirable plan, but the exigency of the public service may require the presence of the troops at some other point. Should this prove to be the case, the responsibility of providing against the aggressions of the bands of hostile Indians in our mountains will rest with Governor Downey.

A Privateer's Story.

The following is a true and interesting story of a privateer, in the harbor of St. George Town, in the island of Grenada, and the narrow escape from the capture of the vessel.

The vessel, the "Yankee," of Breeze, E. L., has never before been recorded to have in the log-book of that fortunate little cruiser.

We will therefore tell the story in the words of her brave and gallant commander as he gathered it from his own lips:

I was in the last week of December, 1812, said Captain Wilson, and while running up to the Havana, that we fell in with a New York privateer, who reported that the island or rather the port of St. George was the rendezvous of the American privateers. That he had sailed from the place only two days before, and left in the harbor only two frigates and two sloops of war, which were being transferred to the American fleet by the privateers.

The vessel, the "Yankee," was a small schooner, and was fitted out by the privateer, and was fitted out by the privateer.

Wigfall Painted to the Life.

Asa Burchard, the youngest alderman, has drawn the following portrait of Senator Wigfall, who, with Jett Davis and Thomas, has taken up quarters in Richmond:

Wigfall is in sixty-seventh years of age, but looks like a man of about forty. He is a little, square-jawed man, with fair hair, which is beginning to turn gray. He has a prominent nose, and a pair of eyes which are somewhat prominent. He is dressed in a dark suit, and has a high collar and a white shirt with a black cravat.

ST. JOHN HOWARD YAZZ.

How sweet the remembrance of home still appears.
From all we have abroad, which bet faster the
The unclouded heart tears and joys with a sigh,
Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
There's no place like home!
There's no place like home!

Your exile is sweet with all that can befall,
But 'neath the wings of the dove, sweet home!
