

DESPERATE FIGHT WITH THE INDIANS IN HUMBOLDT COUNTY.—From the Humboldt Times of the 11th we learn that one of the most desperate fights ever had with Indians in that section of country, took place on Wednesday morning on Redwood creek, at Minor's place. The following account of the battle was written from the battle ground, Thursday morning:

Manheim's train of 35 pack mules, escorted by Lieut. Middleton of Co. C., 1st Battalion, C. M., with 18 men, went up Monday to Fort Gaston with a load of flour; on Tuesday morning they started on their return; about four o'clock in the afternoon they reached Redwood Creek, 18 to 20 miles from Fort Gaston, and camped for the night on the flat about midway between Fort Anderson and Minor's field. Here Lieut. Middleton with Lieut. Hale of Fort Gaston and Mr. Booth left the train and pushed on for Arcata, leaving the escort in charge of Sergeant E. W. Day. About half past three Wednesday morning, as some of the men were saddling their mules for an early start, they were surprised by a volley of rifles from two sides of the camp, taking them nearly in front and rear, part from the undergrowth across the creek and part from the high bluff in the rear which completely commands the camp. At this time their force consisted of Sergeant Day and 17 men of Co. C, Messrs. Wall and Foote of Co. B, and two packers. The Indians were in very large force, from 80 to 100, and pretty well armed with guns—there was not a single arrow fired. They poured in volley after volley, wounding several early in the fight. After three or four hours fighting, five of the company succeeded in reaching the bluff and driving them off across the creek. They fought until about noon, when they reluctantly drew off, carrying their dead and wounded. As they left they fired a parting volley at the mules, killing one and wounding seven; two men were sent on foot to Fort Gaston for ammunition and to bring the Surgeon there. Dr. Phelps, 2d Infantry, who arrived at four o'clock on Thursday morning, with Sergt. Hurst and 7 men from Co. B. The following is a correct list of wounded from Dr. Phelps: Chas. McKee, Co. C, thigh and arm, with Sergt. Hurst and 7 men from Co. B. The following is a correct list of wounded from Dr. Phelps: Chas. McKee, Co. C, thigh and arm, dangerously.

John Blum, Co. C, right lung and leg, dangerously.

Wm. Taylor, Co. C, thigh, shoulder and hand, dangerously.

Gilford Bridges, Co. C, ankle, severely.

Andrew Foote, Co. B, thigh, slightly.

Sergt. E. W. Day, Co. C, thigh, slightly.

George Robinson Co. C, thigh and leg, slightly.

William Stevenson, Co. C, leg slightly.

William Griffin, Co. C, cheek and arm, slightly.

J. McMann, Co. C, leg, slightly.

The Indians fired about 500 rounds, but they got nothing—not a single gun nor anything else. The unfortunate men could not be operated on there, as they would have to be packed after it, to Arcata.

Commenting on the engagement the Times says: "The little party, consisting of a ^{CO THIS} ~~company~~ getting fire from nearly 100 Indians for nine hours and finally routed them without the loss of a gun or any property but one mule. The officers and men and people of Trinity county may well be proud of Company C, if they are all composed of such plucky material as this detachment."

We will take this occasion to thank brother Wiley for this very high and merited compliment to the bravery of our volunteers. And the people of Humboldt and all the outside world may rest assured that the Trinity boys will not be tardy in sustaining their reputation whenever opportunity offers.

"Desperate Fight with the Indians in Humboldt County." Weekly Trinity Journal, July 18, 1863: p. 2, col. 3.

Weekly Trinity Journal

A Family Newspaper, Independent in Politics, and Devoted to the Advancement of Home Interests.

WEAVERVILLE, CALIFORNIA, JULY 18, 1863.

ACT
FOR COMPLEment Asylum.
1863

Society Notices.

Weekly Trinity Journal.

Encourage the Poor.
'Tis good in lengthened verse to paint
The wailow's lifted sigh.

Letter from City