

DIFFERENT NAMES FOR THE SAME THING.

—The Sacramento Watch Dog barks out the following good natured bon mot at the expense of the Hon. Vincent E Geiger, Indian Agent and Superintendent of the Nome Lackee Reservation :

"Hallo, Vince, how are you, old fellow?" said a citizen of Butte the other day to an Indian Agent, the business pertaining to whose Reservation seems to require his frequent appearance in the vicinity of the "Orleans," in this city.—

"How are you, old boy?" continued the Butte county man—"been healthy? you look very well; never saw you so ruddy and fat before." "Why, yes," said Vince, "I do get more ruddy and fleshy as I grow older; it is the effect of a good conscience." "The effect of what?" "A good conscience, sir." "A good conscience! ah, yes, that's what you call it here, is it? we call it whiskey in the mountains; but then, different localities have different names for the same thing, you know." The crowd smiled, and Vince made a donation to the bar-keeper."
