

STILL ANOTHER MURDER BY INDIANS.—On Sunday evening last an attack was made by Indians on three men who were living in a house on Van-Duzen creek. As we understand our informant, the circumstances are about as follows:

Messrs. Coats, Bartlett and another man were herding stock on a ranch near the creek named, and occupied the house. A short time before sunset, Coats went a short distance from the house where he was fired upon by Indians. Several balls took effect, causing almost instant death. When the two men in the house heard the firing, they caught their guns and rushed out to the protection of Coats, who was not armed.

The Indians fired upon them as they came out, inflicting flesh wounds on Bartlett. Their fire was returned until the Indians retreated, leaving one of their number dead on the ground. There were about twenty five Indians in the band.— About half of them were armed with rifles, and they were all tolerably well dressed in white men's clothing.

We also hear that a house was burned at Lara-bee's ranch on the same day, together with a lot of grain in the stack.— The details of this affair we have not heard.— Humboldt Times.

Weaverville, California, Saturday, September 7, 1861.

R'S	H. J. SEAMAN, TRINITY JOURNAL.		Privateering Lucie In the last French what was called "the" something by some privateers to flash o line out at sea, and it back, with vultur
	EAST SIDE MAIN STREET, WEAVERVILLE. — HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND — A Large and General Assortment, of
W. V.	San Francisco Agency,		