Strayed or Stolen!

ON the 3d day of September, 1861, an Indian boy about 14 years of age, came to my place, upon the back of a Cayuse, Pinto horse, and he could talk English but very little, said he came from the North and had been out eight weeks, could not tell where he was going to; he said his name was "Harry;" had on a stiff gum elastic hat, a knit sack coat and three woollen shirts. I thought the boy had been stealing, and I concluded to keep him. I kept him two days and he absconded. I have the horse and saddle yet, and the owner may have the same by applying to me, at my Ranch on Yager creek, Humboldt county.

THE BATTLE HYMN.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.
O Lord of Hosts! Almighty King!
Behold the sacrifice we bring!
To every arm Thy strength impart,
Thy Spirit shed through every heart!

Wake in our breasts the living fire,
The holy faith that warms our fires!
Thy hand hath made our Nation free;
Tebdo for her—be serving Thee!

Be Thou a pillar'd flame to show
The path that leads to glory,
And when the battle thunders loud,
Still guide us on in His moving cloud!

God of all Nations! Sovereign Lord!
In Thy dread name we draw the sword.
We lift the starry flag on high
That all with light our army sky.

From treason's nest, from murder's stain,
Guard Thou its folds till Vesper's bell ring—
Till fort and fold, till shore and sea,
Join our loud anthem, praise to Thee:

A TALE WITH A HAPPY ENDING.
The Great Valley National Hotel, the following interesting statement:

We had a few moments conversation the other day, with one of those daring, hardy fellows who are employed as riders on the pony express route, riding from the Goose Creek terminus into the risk of the Carson—a distance of 101 miles—about the longest route on the trail. He describes the life there in the

Mr. John Bright, M. P., on the War in America.

[From the Manchester Guardian, August 21.]
Last evening, Mr. John Bright, the liberal candidate for Parliament, addressed a meeting of electors and others in the Public Hall, Rochdale. The Mayor, J. H. Moore, Esq., was called to the chair, and among those upon the platform was John Bright, Esq., M. P.

Mr. Bright, who was then called upon by the Mayor, was received with enthusiastic and repeated cheering. He said:

Now, is this cotton question a great question, or not? I met a spinner to-day and he does not live in Rochdale, though I met him here—and I asked him what he thought about it, and he said: "Well, I think cotton will come somehow." (Laughter.) And I find that there is that kind of answer to be had from three out of four of all the spinners you ask.

They know that in just times, when cotton has been fifty or sixty per cent more expensive than the commodity that it is, the rate of interest was raised, or that it has been a numerical panic from some cause or another, and down the price has gone; and when everything said "There would be no cotton at Christmas," there proved a very considerable stock at Christmas. And so they say now, I don't in the least doubt that it

The following President:

The Philadelphia Press gives some interesting particulars of the late engagement of Charleston, between the U. S. frigate St. Lawrence and the privateer Petrel:

The vessel of the St. Lawrence was by Judge that easy privateer would not know her true character, and to still further her armament and object, the port-holes were kept closed and her mainmast put out of sight. She cruised for a month along the Atlantic coast, between Cape Henry and Savannah, and on the morning of the 1st of August, while just outside the harbor of Charleston, espied a long rakish schooner, filled with men and mounting 4 or 5 guns, sailing rapidly down upon her. The port-holes were still shut, but the flag was at the peak, and the St. Lawrence looked not unlike a great lumbering mercantile man.

ed in a strange latitude, and took command widely for any purposes save the holding of this court and a damnable privateering.

As the stranger came down, the St. Lawrence hoisted all sail and affected to be anxious to get out to sea. In reality, however, she was edging closer inshore, and making arrangements below to receive the reckless visitors with appropriate and making arrangements below to receive the reckless visitors with appropriate and making arrangements below to receive the reckless visitors with appropriate
