

NOME CULT INDIAN FARM.—A correspondent writing from Round Valley, to the Santa Rosa Democrat, says:

The Nome Cult Indian farm under the management of S. P. Storms, is in a flourishing condition—extensive and good crops were raised this season. All kinds of vegetables are raised in the greatest abundance. Improvements, considering the facilities at hand, have been made to a great extent. Several enlightened families are settled here, which has a tendency to soften and civilize what would otherwise be somewhat rough and heathenish. The Indians are generally contented, and are being made useful in producing the wherewith to maintain them. A large number of stock has been brought to this and adjoining valleys, as they are Edens in soil and production, in comparison with the parched up Sacramento and other valleys.

NEVADA, CALIFORNIA, WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 22, 1853.

Thursday last, Sept.

M. there was quite a... came very suddenly among scientific men, that the moon was formingly a portion of the earth, and that in past ages, it has been thrown off by some tremendous internal explosion. There can be no doubt that, in her time, the earth has proved dangerously unstable, and may so prove hereafter. We are treading on very tender ground when we walk over her surface, as well as clear if we believe her interior to consist of a spherical mass in a state of enormous fusion. Certainly it is within the bounds of truth to say that the earth's shell offers in itself a portion of infinite resistance than that of any other. All the phenomena of past ages, as well as the phenomena occurring in our own times, clearly show the whole face of our globe to be in a state of perpetual stability. The earth's surface, with a few deep lakes and rivers, and the forests of lava which belated the calcined fields, bear a very different aspect to the future face of the planet of our globe. With the face of the planet of our globe, we may say that the whole world is really a scene of a grand and magnificent spectacle that we are now enjoying.

The Future of the Earth.

It is now a very generally received theory among scientific men, that the moon was formedly a portion of the earth, and that in past ages, it has been thrown off by some tremendous internal explosion. There can be no doubt that, in her time, the earth has proved dangerously unstable, and may so prove hereafter. We are treading on very tender ground when we walk over her surface, as well as clear if we believe her interior to consist of a spherical mass in a state of enormous fusion. Certainly it is within the bounds of truth to say that the earth's shell offers in itself a portion of infinite resistance than that of any other. All the phenomena of past ages, as well as the phenomena occurring in our own times, clearly show the whole face of our globe to be in a state of perpetual stability. The earth's surface, with a few deep lakes and rivers, and the forests of lava which belated the calcined fields, bear a very different aspect to the future face of the planet of our globe. With the face of the planet of our globe, we may say that the whole world is really a scene of a grand and magnificent spectacle that we are now enjoying.

Death of Senator Wm. I. Ferguson.

At precisely five o'clock yesterday afternoon, Senator William I. Ferguson, of Sacramento, died at the Union Hotel in this city, of a pistol wound, given by Geo. Penn Johnson, in a duel, fought on Angel Island, Aug. 21st. During the last week, Mr. Ferguson has been gradually growing weaker, although his spirits remained as cheerful as at first, and even until yesterday he entertained sanguine hopes of his ultimate recovery. Shortly after that hour, however, his physicians, Drs. Sawyer and Angell, decided, from the appearance of the wound, that it was indispensably necessary to make an incision into the thigh, which operation was most skillfully and successfully performed by Dr. Sawyer, the patient meanwhile being under the influence of chloroform. The object of this operation was to remove a portion of the wound and to determine whether or not amputation was necessary. The latter was not deemed necessary, but the operation was so successful, however, that the patient was able to stand, and to walk, with the assistance of a friend, and to attend to his business, which resulted in a complete recovery. The whole matter at the discretion of the physician, and the patient was able to attend to his business, which resulted in a complete recovery.
