Hasst been where the fall-blossom'd bay-tree is blowing
 With odours like Eden around?
 Hasst seen where the broad-leaved palmetto is growing,
 And wild vines are-fringing the ground?
 Hasst sat in the shade of catalpas, at noon,
 And are the cool gurgles of the climate
 Or slept where magnolias were screening the moon,
 And the mocking bird sang her sweet rhyme?
 And didst mark, in thy jibberjabs at dew-dropping eve,
 Some ruin peer high o'er thy way,
 With rocks wheeling round it, and bushes to weave
 A mantle for turrets so gray?
 Did you ask if some lord of the cavalier kind,
