

PRETTY GOOD.—On Friday evening last, about 8 o'clock, the mail steamer Columbia arrived off the bar, fired a gun, and dropped her anchor, intending to lay there till morning, waiting for the pilot. About 10 o'clock, Capt. Buhne and Broderson, accompanied by two Indians, crossed the bar in a canoe, and brought the steamer in about 12 o'clock at night. This is the first time, we believe, a vessel has ever crossed our bar at night.
