

INDIAN TROUBLES IN THE NORTH.—We yesterday met a gentleman, for whose veracity and judgment we can vouch, who has been long a resident of the Klamath river country, and enjoyed the best possible means of information on the subject, who gave us some information concerning the reported Indian hostilities in that region, which should be regarded by the authorities in whatever steps are taken on the premises.— He assures us that there has been no hostile disposition manifested by the Indians towards the whites in general, and that the only depredations that have been committed have been provoked by a parcel of abandoned characters, who live in the vicinity of the villages, and who are in the constant habit of committing the grossest outrages upon the squaws. In a few instances these outrages have been avenged by the Indians, by shooting their aggressors, or killing their stock. These acts of retribution are called Indian outrages, and are made the pretext for fresh outrages upon the poor red skins. Our informant has been in the habit, for years, of making weekly trips, in the prosecution of his business, through the heart of the country in which the hostilities are reported, and has seen no disposition manifested to molest the whites who behave themselves as white men should do.
