

PITT RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION.—Col. Stevenson, who for some time past has been engaged in the exploration of the Indian country on Pitt river, has at length located a Reservation in the upper portion of the valley. The Yreka Union says:

This is a matter of great importance to the people of this county, and it is to be hoped that no time will be lost in completing arrangements for the removal of all the Indians in this region on to the new reservation, and for their safe-keeping there. In order to effect so desirable an end, a judicious agent should be appointed for the reservation, possessing a knowledge of Indian habits and character, and acquainted with their language; one in whom the Indians would place confidence, and who could and would exercise a wholesome restraint and control over them. The troops already stationed at Fort Crook, under command of Capt. Gardiner, we presume will constitute as large a military force as will be required. We understand that two Indian agents will be appointed for the northern part of the State, and presume one of them will be stationed at Pitt River Reservation. It is cause for congratulation among our citizens that at least there is a rational prospect of an end to Indian depredations on life and property in our frontier settlements.

DEFECTIVE

DAILY UNION

MORNING, OCTOBER 10, 1857.

DAILY UNION.

SUMMER NOON.

Sophie's blue eyes danced with suppressed merriment as she gave two or three heavy breathings, and followed them up with a nasal explomoment, with a little scream, leaped arms of—not sister Kate, but Harry Air

* * * * *