

~~Pitt River.~~ The Marysville Inquirer has news direct from Pitt river. The Indians are still hostile; they are very numerous and have strong fortifications in the mountains to which they retreat when pursued. Several thousand savages are at Big Bend, above Silverhorn's ferry, and it is dangerous for small companies of whites to go near them. They were driven from Fort Crocker, some thirty miles above there, by the soldiers, and are now assembled at that place. It is thought with the avowed intention of whipping out the whites, and making that place their winter quarters. The soldiers were expected down every day from the Fort, for the purpose of driving them from that place, as it was considered quite dangerous to the whites for them to remain there. There has been no fighting of late between them and the soldiers, as it has been some five or six weeks since they left the Fort. It is expected, however, that a battle will ensue immediately on the arrival of the soldiers.
