

COMING TO TOWN.—The Diggers, like their more civilized neighbors, have began to move in from the country, coerced, most likely, by the wet weather and plentiful scarcity of grass-hoppers, and are now met with in small, squatting squads, around the back doors of hotels and restaurants, gathering up the garbage and wasteful profusion of people who are well enough to do to live in houses. These poor aborigines serve as faithful scavengers and don't harm anybody, and now that blackberry picking has been long since "played out," have no money to buy whisky of the poor white trash, and are consequently well behaved citizens and should not be molested.
