

THE Humboldt Indians, in spite of the wholesale "punishments" they have experienced, continue to steal beef cattle occasionally, when hunger impels them. Strange that these unhappy creatures cannot stifle the yearnings of nature without food, and live, or die, out of the way of their gentle superiors!—Marysville Appeal

Fie, fie, Avery; these same murdering, plundering, snail-eating ragabouds have been sent to the Reservation more than once, where they had plenty of beef and potatoes. They prefer to murder and steal for a living. There are some tolerably good Indians, and some infernal mean white men in Humboldt, Avery.

nia, Saturday, November 23, 1861.

STAFF | A Familiar Letter from "Hetty Scissors." | [From the New York E