

Indian Outbreak at Klamath Reservation.

The Crescent City Herald of the 2d instant, contains the following letter:

KLAMATH RESERVATION, Nov. 23d, 1857.

For the past month, the Agent in charge has been aware of an attempt being made to unite the different tribes upon the river and Hoopa Valley, with the Indians who had been removed from the vicinity of Smith River, for the purpose of a grand outbreak, at the head of which was an Indian commonly known as "Regua Mike."

On the 10th inst., Mike came to the Agent and Lieut. Geo. Crook, and told them that the Tolaws (as the Klamaths call them,) had laid a plan to murder the Agent and Lieutenant: that they said if they killed them, all the property would belong to them, and they could then go to the mountains; that they were to come up and ask the Agent for a talk, when he would take them into the house, they spring upon him, and the white men with him, with their knives, and cut their throats. At the same time another party was to cross the river, and waylay the Lieutenant, when, as they supposed, his men would be easily whipped, as they would run to the brush. On Saturday, 14th inst., they attacked a small party of Klamaths, and wounded several; and on Sunday the Agent went to the village for the purpose of having them make peace with the Klamaths, when he was immediately surrounded by some forty of the Tolaws in war-rig, and to extricate themselves were forced to send for the guard, when, after talking to them, he compelled them to go to their homes, and the Klamaths to Wakell-station, at the same time telling them that if they attempted to fight, he would let the soldiers fire on both parties; that there must be no fighting amongst them: that he would protect one as much as the other: if Klamaths attacked the Tolaws, he would fire upon the Klamaths, and he would do the same to the Tolaws, if they attacked the Klamaths.

On Monday, 16th, the Agent succeeded in getting them to make peace and exchange a-la-que-check.

On Tuesday morning, 17th inst., an old squaw came to the station and told the Agent that the Yon-tak-et-mow-e-na was very sick and wanted to see him. In company with Mr. Goodspeed, he started for the village, distant about half a mile from the station, and had scarcely entered the house of the supposed sick man, when Regua Mike stepped into the door, remarking: "How do you, Major," and presented a yager to the breast of the Agent and fired, the muzzle being within a few inches of his breast. The quickness of the Agent in turning it aside, as Mike pulled the trigger, was all that saved his life. The Agent and Mr. Goodspeed immediately seized Mike, when the Tolaws rushed upon them, and commenced to throw their arrows. A fight ensued, which the Agent and Mr. Goodspeed sustained for at least fifteen minutes, until relief arrived from the station, when the Indians were completely routed, with a loss of ten of their number killed. Since the fight, about one hundred and forty have returned, and are now living in their houses.

JOHN G. HYATT, Acting Clerk.

LOSS OF THE RUSSIAN MAN-O-WAR LEOPARD. The Journal de St. Petersburg, of October 1st, publishes the following details of the loss of the Russian ship-of-the-line Leopard, already announced...

On the 28th of August (September 9th) four ships-of-the-line—the Imperatrice Alexandra, the Vladimir, the Tarkhan, and the Panikula, of 74 guns, which were at the Point of View—received orders to form a fleet to cross the straits...

The vessel, after being very much damaged, was not being able to find any place where they had left their companions, at length saw their cause, broken down with fatigue and thirst, dying from hour to hour in the desert...

In the meanwhile three Arab auxiliaries accidentally finding the caravan, offered to furnish the caravan with the necessary camels to transport their goods as far as Hili, demanding as a reward, in advance payment of twenty thousand dollars...

Returning to their companions the party related the story of their misadventure. They gave place to despair, and the camp was thrown into confusion. Two hours after this, a party of friendly Arabs, chasing the wild gazelle, came up and announced the approach of the Arabs, well on pillage. Panic then seized the whole caravan...
