The accounts from Shasta are to the 7th. Miners were generally prosperous. Rich and extensive diggings have recently been struck in the vicinity of Pitt river. A correspondent of the Union, writing from that place, says:

The Indians, the pests of the northern country, have thus far prevented a full development of our wealth, but the influx of miners which we shall have will certainly drive them back.

Last night, about three miles from town, n ar Rock creek, two mules were shot by the Indians—the arrows were found in them—and six were run off. One night last week, three mules and three head of cattle were stolen from the correls in town. A large number of animals were also run off from some packers n Clear creek. On Sunday right of last week, a dairy of twenty-three cows and about twenty five nules and oxen were run off by the Indians from the middle ferry, but they were all subsequently recovered, all eloss being discovered before the In tians had got a mile away. All these depredations have a very bad effect upon our business, for I have not told you one half of the robberies I am daily hearing.
