Trouble among the Indians.

We learn that there is trouble among the Dieguinos Indians in this county, in consequence of the re-appointment by Superintendent Beale, of old Tomas, as Captain-General over that tribe. We have seen communications from La Mesa, in the vicinity of the Dieguinos Indians, stating that they manifest great dissatisfaction at having old Tomas thrust upon them again, and that they even threaten rebellion.

Since Tomas was publicly whipped by our sheriff, a few months since, for stealing, his tribe has lost all respect for him, and express a fixed determination not to serve under or obey him.

Col. C. J. Coutts, the present sub-Indian agent for this county, has taken so much interest in the regulation of the San Luis Rey Indians, and has brought them into such a state of subjection, by his judicious management, that his neighboring Rancheros, living in the vicinity of the Dieguinos, have applied to him to extend his control over the Indians in their vicinity, and organize some system by which they can be governed and restrained. They have also applied to have old Tomas removed, and Panto appointed as their Captain.

AWFULLY APPALLING.—The State Journal says that the enormous sum of $175,000 has already been expended by the Custom House opponents of the Senatorial election. This is a tough story, but an interesting question might be raised and possibly worked out by the single rule of three. If one individual has expended $175,000 merely to have the election postponed, with no immediate hope of profit, how much has been expended by another individual for bringing it on, with a prospect of being the successful candidate for the office? Those fond of mathematical problems may possibly find amusement in figuring it out. I remain, A. JONAS.

We clip the above from the Evening News, and like "Jonas" consider it a very tough story. This "howl" set up by the Broderick papers, about the enormous amount of money spent by the Custom House to have this election postponed, is the old cry of "stop thief," practised by light fingered gentry, when detected in running away with property which did not come honestly into their possession. Knowing their own exposed condition upon this bribery plat-
