

FROM YREKA—INDIANS.—The party of 16 men who pursued some Indians with stolen stock from the head of Shasta Valley some time since, returned this week. They report that they tracked an Indian runner from the head of the valley on the trail of the stolen stock and thieves to McCloud's River, a distance of from 100 to 150 miles, where they found the Indians, and attacked them on the opposite side of the river. The difficulty in crossing the river, however, saved the Indians a severe drubbing. They fled, with the loss of perhaps a few men and all their camp equipage, &c.—Amongst their icters was found a pocket book in which was the name of "J. P. Beattis, Mansfield, Ohio," supposed to be stolen from the owner, whom in all probability they had murdered. The Indian runner they tracked back to the camp of some Indians in Shasta Valley, which some of them pitched into and cleaned out.

We learn from a gentleman who arrived in town on Thursday evening last, that four Indians were killed by some whites on Trinity River a few days since. It appears that they had stolen some stock of the whites, and were given up by the Indians of Trinity River, to which tribe they did not belong. Served them right.

We are grieved to learn that a white man, whose name we are not in possession of, was killed at the same time, by the accidental discharge of a rifle. Men cannot be too careful in handling fire-arms.—Yreka Herald.

Miners were generally doing well. There is a scarcity of water in the more elevated diggings in the vicinity of Yreka.

The Herald mentions a specimen recently found there weighing 14 oz.

A correspondent, writing from Sucker Creek, April 4th, estimates that there are 2,000 men on the coast above Crescent City, most of them wandering up and down, looking for diggings. The want of water, however, has obliged many to leave. Higher up Rogue River, men are
