

We sincerely trust that the successor of Lieut Beale, as Superintendent of Indian Affairs, will manifest the same spirit the exercise of which has made the labors of Mr. Beale so successful among the Indian tribes, who are now gathered upon the Tejon reservation. The policy which has been pursued has been one of kind and mild treatment, retaining as much as possible of the old patriarchal form of government by the chiefs of the various tribes, and the use of as little coercive power as possible. The result has been beyond the fondest anticipations of the most sanguine; and, from all that we can ascertain, the reservation is in a most flourishing condition, and the Indians located upon it happy, contented, and industrious. If the successor to Mr. Beale is the one whose name has been used as such, we do not doubt he will be fully capable, and strongly desirous to carry out the work Lieut. Beale has commenced.
