

The Light House at Cape Disappointment, at the mouth of the Columbia River, has just been completed. Hereafter, sailors will have some beacon to apprise them of the entrance to the Columbia. This Light House was provided for by Congress some four years ago, and last fall the vessel having on board the material for it was wrecked in crossing the bar, and hence the delay for six months.—Times.

The harvest is nearly over. Crops are abundant throughout the territory. The weather has been favorable for harvesting—no rains for a long time.—ib.

Two or three Indians have lately been shot by the whites in Rogue River valley. The Indians claim that the whites should be tried and hung. If something is not done to satisfy them, they threaten another outbreak, which would be unfortunate at this time of year to settlers having large crops just harvested; as the Indians would commence burning dry wheat fields and granaries as a commencement of hostilities.—Statesman.
