

NORTHERN INDIANS.—The Trinity Times learn that Col. Mooney, Sub-Indian Agent for that section of the State, finds great difficulty in inducing the Indians to remove from their mountain homes to the "Reservation" in Colusa county. In fact they won't go, and for the following reasons, according to the Times :

"It has always appeared to us a most absurd idea to attempt to carry out with the Indians of Northern California such a system as the one now pursued, for it is utterly impossible to carry it into effect. Even if they could be induced to go to the Reservation they would not remain there any length of time; for the Mountain and the Valley Indians have always been at feud with one another, and when so many different tribes are brought together it is impossible for them to fraternize. Old quarrels will break out afresh, new ones will arise, and the result will be that the Mountain Indians will return to their native hills and their but temporarily abandoned rancheras; and the Government will find that the money appropriated for this purpose has been expended merely to the aggrandizement of a few officials, who may for awhile fatten on the spoils of office—but the poor "Diggers," for whose benefit the money was intended, will be no better off than if nothing had been attempted in their behalf. Neither will the expenditure of all this money be of any benefit to the white settlers; for they will soon have the Indians back upon their hands again, more ready than before for murder, theft and petty depredations, because they will consider themselves as having been deceived by the whites into a removal from the hills where they have roved in freedom from their infancy, to be confined within the contracted limits of a few acres of barren land and in an unhealthy climate

"DOWN WITH THE ADMINISTRATION.—This was the language of the Missouri Democrat, a Benton paper, published in St. Louis upon receiving the returns of the elections in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana. It says :

Each of these three States gave large majorities
