SAN DIEGO, CAL., THURSDAY, NOV. 27, 1851.

Alarmed.

The people resident on ranches south and east of this city, becoming alarmed at the hostile feelings exhibited by the Indians, are flocking to our town for protection. Whilst we regret the necessity that has compelled them to abandon much of their property, we cannot but congratulate ourselves on the addition to our society of so many fair Californians, whose beauty and native accomplishments have long been the theme of praise in our midst.
