

SAN DIEGO HERALD.

1. SAN DIEGO, CAL., THURSDAY, NOV. 27, 1851.

Two or three invalided officers of the U. S. Army, who are here from the North, for the restoration, if possible, of valuable health lost in the service of their country, promptly volunteered as privates in the organization of our company of volunteers. Such instances of moral heroism and christian philanthropy, are worthy of the Miller school, whose war cry in '14 was "I'll try or die"—and deserve to be recorded. They tend to throw around the altar of our worship a holy and beautiful light, that can only emanate from minds imbued with something beyond the materialism and earthiness of those natives who evinced an unwillingness to come forward, the other evening, at the call of humanity.
