the are under many obligations to Mr. Antenne, for the obligation on the Gila. Our friends of the Ferry Company may rest assured that Major Heinztelman, the commanding officer of the U.S. troops in this district, has taken every precaution for their protection, and will and them to the extent of the means at his disposal. He is an active, efficient, and energetic officer, as is shown by his acts during the past week.

RIO COLORADO, Nov. 13th, 1851.

DRAR Str.: The subject of writing to you, has been under consideration for two months past: and was only defered for want of anything of interest to communicate, but our old friends, the Yuman, have finally supplied the defied for want of anything of interest to communicate, but our old friends, the Yuman, have finally supplied the defi-ciency. No doubt you are aware that last June Major Heintzelman and his command, with the exception of Lieutenant Sweeney and ten men, were ordered from the river to Srn Diego. But a few days elapsed after their departure, when a manifest change was observed in the actions of the ladians, and on two or three occasions since, we were fully convinced that they contemplated an attack, but were thecked by us being on the alert. On the 10th inst., we crossed some 1500 sheep for Mesurs. Morgan, Quay and rilnes. On the morning of the 11th Mr. Quay, a German named Neagel, and two Mexicans, left with the sheep. About 11 o'clock, we crossed Morgan and Hines, and a Mr. Wilson, who was traveling in company with them, with eight animals. They immediately followed the sheep. Two hours after the Indians commenced gathering around our camp. From questions asked of their chiefs, we found they had no particular business. At this time we had counted over 100, and they were still increasing. Lieut. Sweeney then ordered them to leave, which they refused to do, until he placed his 12 pound howitzer in position to rake the only probable asked of their chiers, we sound they had no particular ousiness. At this time we had counted over 100, and they were still increasing. Lieut. Sweeney then ordered them to leave, which they refused to do, until he placed his 12 pound howitzer in position to rake the only probable point of attack. They then retired their countenances evincing disappointment. About 11 o'clock, v. M., Neagel, the German, came to our camp, reporting that when they had advanced about 4 miles on the road, (where the road passed between some large cotton woods, 2 miles above the Algadones,) they were surrounded by Indians, who attempted taking their blankets and provisions from the pack animals. Mr. Quay and he resisted. They then attacked the former with clubs, and endeavored to take a knife from the latter—the only weapon between the two. He succeeded in retaining the knife, and escaped into a thicket, where he remained concealed until dark, when he reached our camp. On the evening of the 12th. Lt Mdrray reached here, having left a train of six wagons and 16 men at the Algadones. On hearing the occurrences of the day before, he immediately returned to his command. The next morning he reached us in safety. but on the way up, found the bodies of four men. From the description. I believe them to be Mr. Quay and Mor-gan, and tee two Mexicans. The other two, Hines and Wilson, may have escaped, their bodies not having been found it so, you will hear of them before I do. I give the names and place of residence. Washington Morgan was a native of Harford county, Md., late a resident of Baltimore, James Quay and Charles Hines were residents, and I believe eatives of Baltimore.

You will doubtless have all the particulars when Lt. Sweeney arrives at San Diego.

Yours, &c.,

Wm. J. Ankrim
