

THE INDIANS IN THE NORTH.—Under the caption "What shall be done with the Indians?" the Trinity Times says :

The Indians on the South Fork of the Trinity river have recently become very troublesome to the settlers in that section of the country. The depredations were the acts of Indians who have recently returned from the Reservation of Colusa. The friendly Indians say that they were driven away from the Reservation by the agent at that place, but the Times is of the opinion that they left of their own accord.

The Times in view of the fact that the Indians refuse to remain on the reservation, but leave for the purpose of again indulging in their favorite propensities of stealing, murder, &c., inquires what is to be done with them? And in reply suggests that a reservation be established in Trinity county. Once settled there with a suitable person in charge of the reservation, they would soon become sufficiently skilled in agriculture to raise everything necessary for their maintenance; and, instead of our continually hearing of instances of annoying depredations on the part of the whites, we would receive the agreeable intelligence of our citizens pursuing their avocations in undisturbed security, and of the wild savages becoming sensible of the advantages of civilization and satisfied with their new mode of life.
