

Shasta Courier, Volume 2, Number 11, 21 May 1853 — Page 1 Advertisements Column 3 [ADVERTISEMENT]

Back

 We see by the Columbia Gazette of Saturday that an Indian war, between different tribes, is brewing in Tuolumne. The cause assigned is the killing of an Indian who prophesied against them. After negotiating for several days, says the Gazette, without an amicable settlement of the difficulty, the two tribes resolved to settle the affair by a pitched battle, on Table Mountain, on Thursday last. It was a mournful and melancholy sight to hear the wailings of the women and children as they passed to their hiding places in the mountains, previous to the contemplated battle. The battle, we presume, did not take place, as the day was an unusually rainy and disagreeable one, and we saw a number of warriors on that day in Columbia. If a compromise is not made, or if the legal authorities do interfere, a battle will inevitably take place, as considerable preparation—such as pointing arrows and whetting knives—have been already made, and both parties are resolved on fighting.

This article has been automatically clipped from the Shasta Courier 21 May 1853, organised into a single column, then optimised for display on your computer screen. As a result, it may not look exactly as it did on the original page. The article can be seen in its original form in the page view.