

tourer's building, between the two arroyos, which set fire to some curtains. In a few minutes the whole building was in flames. It spread by rods and not by feet, for the buildings were of wood or canvas.

The fire was stopped on the south at the city City Hotel, opposite to our office, and at Mr. Lane's new building, next adjoining to our office. The heat was so intense that the hands of the printers were blistered in carrying out the cases of type.

On the North the fire was stopped at Jackson street, by the Hook and Ladder Company, in connection with the Hose Company.

Adams & Co., and Wells, Fargo & Co. both lost their buildings, but their vaults stand, and their books and treasure are all safe.

The loss of property is estimated at $300,000. We are pained to record, in addition the loss of human life. E. B. Lundy, a Canadian by birth, and late from Placer County, was sleeping in the rear of Holden's saloon, and was burned. The remains are identified by a pistol which had been loaned to him by a friend. He was often called Jim Lundy, in consequence of having a brother of that name, for whom he was frequently taken.

TWO INDIANS KILLED.—We learn that on Tuesday last two Indians were killed in the vicinity of Mill Seat Creek, by Mr. Mackley, son of the gentleman whose death we noticed last week. The Indians who were killed were friendly to the whites, and were in search of strayed cattle, but unfortunately they were not recognised as such by Mr. Mackley. Too much care could not be used in the Indian hunts that are so frequent on the east of the Sacramento. The death of a few friendly and trustworthy Indians is ever productive of great harm, and the life or property of the whites is sure, sooner or later, to pay the penalty.
