THE TEJON RESERVATION.—Through the polite attention of a friend, we have been furnished with information from the Indian Reservation at the Tejon, from which it would appear that through the efficient management of the Superintendent of Indian Affairs—Col. Henley—everything presents a flourishing appearance in that quarter. The Indians appear to be contented and well pleased with their new mode of life and living. Peace and plenty abound, and all things go on smoothly with them. And yet, with it all, a system of rigid, but not niggardly economy is practised by the veteran Superintendent. While husbanding in the most praiseworthy manner the means at his command, expenditures for and issues made to the Indians are so ordered as to leave them entirely satisfied.—Time and Transcript.

“After procuring a copy of every paper brought into these Northern Mines that money can buy, and many that I sent for, that cannot be replaced, for the use of the public, free of charge, the mean wretch that would be guilty of taking them, would not hesitate to rob the grave of the only flower that could ever grow over his mother's corpse.”
