

Shasta Courier, Volume 3, Number 48, 3 February 1855 — From VreUu. [ARTICLE]

Back

From Yreka.

We are indebted to Jack Horsley, of Cram, Rogers & Co.'s Express for the Mountain Herald of the 27th.

In speaking of the Indian disturbances in the North, the Herald says:

The Indians on the Klamath River, from Happy Camp to the ocean, a distance of about one hundred and fifty miles, including those in Trinity Valley, on the Bald Hills and Red Wood Creek, numbering in all about one thousand warriors, have taken the war path against the whites, and unless aid is immediately extended the Klamath River and Trinity Valley must be entirely abandoned by the whites.

It is thought that the Indians have been preparing for this outbreak for the past two years.

The commander of Fort Jones has so few men at that post that he is unable to render any assistance in this emergency.

We learn, by letter, that Mr. Strawbridge, who was reported to have been killed by the Klamath Indians, escaped by dint of desperate fighting. His companion was killed.

Cram, Rogers & Co. write us of another bloody tragedy recently enacted at Yreka, which resulted in the death of Leroy C. Rogers at the hands of Jacob Williams. Rogers commenced the attack with a revolver, putting three balls through the body of Williams before the latter could reach him. When he succeeded in doing so, however, he stabbed him four times in and about the chest—killing him almost instantly. Williams lies almost without possibility of recovery. A Coroner's jury rendered a ver-

... that Rogers met his death at the hands of Williams—who acted in self-defence. A Spanish woman, it is thought, was the cause of this unhappy affair.

This article has been automatically clipped from the Shasta Courier 3 February 1855, organised into a single column, then optimised for display on your computer screen. As a result, it may not look exactly as it did on the original page. The article can be seen in its original form in the page view.